Comments: It is vital the Forest Service the support of cultural burning through the projected areas in the Northwest Forest Plan. The Tribal Nations require government to government consultation so ensure you include the Indigenous People of whose homelands this project is taking place on.

Cultural burning can be a vital factor to ensure the health of these forest and old growth. It has protected old growth forest for thousands of years and will be a key element to ensure the Forest health can sustain the changes our future generations will endure. Not only does cultural fire bring back traditional land stewardship but also ceremony, language revitalization, community harm reduction, soil health, plant propagation, pest prevention/management, and so many positive outcomes for the ecosystems.
