Comments: As a resident of the area locally known as the Ocala National Forest, I have been witness to your policies with growing disgust--your awareness of this area is map based, not field based and the havoc your policies are causing is escalating. To wit--every time you mess around adding carbon by burning (an anachronistic method that ought have been banned decades ago), we have ambulances from people choking, and car accidents galore from both smoke and the hysteria of the almost extinct wildlife. Additionally, old trees ought to be preserved with great diligence--there are far too few.

What with the climate crises, Forestry looks absolutely stupid destroying the green life that is our oxygen source and climate stabilizer.

In truth, if you left the ONF alone for fifty years, everything would be better for it
