Comments: I can't believe this is coming up AGAIN! C'mon. REALLY? regardless of what the EIR might or might say, the Catamount project is a bad idea. Recreation which is always relegated to the bottom of the prioroty list will suffer. Saul's Creek is a great example. Which is one of the only accessible areas of public lands in that part of the county. One cannot go anywhere in there without the ever present noise of the hissing and farting of the jack pumps. Compressor stations are behemoths that can be heard for miles, belch exhaust and speak mostly to the profits generated by the industry. Not to mention the amount of trash the gas field workers simply throw out the windows of their vehicles they go whipping around the expanding array of gravel roads. There are people, horses, cyclists and dogs. This area is a very unique bio-region that simply does not need more traffic. It's a bad idea. Maybe the Forest Circus can get their hands out of the pockets of multi-million dollar industries and work for, as their name implies "Public Lands".
