Comments: There is no immediate fire danger in the proposed area of Dixie Comstock. There has been a recent fire that solves the problems of fire danger. This is the natural way to take care of the matter. The emergency labeling is just an excuse for greedy logging companies to get timber that they should not be logging. It's close to a wilderness area. The 2001 Dixie Fire Project should rule in this case. We need to follow science-based protocols. Any fire danger is chiefly to structure. In that case, owners are in charge of any logging and trimming on their own properties. These owners don't seem to be the ones requesting the logging. They may be situated where they are because they like the unlogged forest. I repeat, this is an attempt by big logging companies to grab resources belonging to all of us. I hope that big companies with power and money still don't rule the country.
