Comments: Dear Forest Supervisor:

Please leave in place the rule that allows the removal of cabins when the last member of the family of the original owner dies out. This is the rule on wilderness land on the Current River in Missouri. The only reason I can see for the Forest Service changing the rule for region 10 in Alaska is that it eliminates the need for the Forest Service to monitor real estate transactions. Since the area is a wilderness area, I think the cabins should be phased out under the existing rules.

Thank you,
Lynn N Friesner
