

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 3/8/2024 4:22:33 PM

First name: Joan

Last name: Smith

Organization:

Title:

Comments: It is more critical now than ever to reduce the effect people have on the environment. The original plan to eliminate cabins that had been built and occupied prior to the designation of wilderness land was fair to the owners and to future generations and the environment. They do not belong in designated Wilderness. Do not change this policy. The U.S. Forest Service must phase out ANILCA cabins. Cabins were never meant to persist in Wilderness and we must do whatever possible to live with the environment and not repurpose it to human exploitation.