

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 3/8/2024 4:32:07 PM

First name: Kevin

Last name: Proescholdt

Organization:

Title:

Comments: As someone who has visited designated Wildernesses in Alaska, I want to comment on the Forest Service's proposed policy change regarding cabins. Cabins don't belong in designated Wilderness. The U.S. Forest Service must leave its policy unchanged and phase out ANILCA cabins, as was the original intent. These cabins were never meant to persist in Wilderness, and to change this policy would undermine ANILCA and the Wilderness Act. Phase out the ANILCA cabins, don't grandfather them in forever!