Comments: Please prioritize the wilderness, and phase out cabins and structures. I have lived in rural areas in forested areas where long term leases were allowed. The system that worked fairly well 50 years ago is challenged in this current time. There is a need to remove decaying structures and restore land.

The public lands need to be evaluated whenever there is a human impact, waste water and garbage are of particular concern.

Without the stewardship funding, there cannot be an easy and safe way to manage this property.

The least costly and risky choice is to remove aging structures and create recreational areas in nearby communities that have infrastructure. Zero impact, low impact recreational systems are now offered by many outfitters, however they do not own the land and are permitted annually.

Flyfishing, Rafting and LLama Backpacking are some examples. Keep the wilderness intact.
