Comments: Cabins don't belong in designated Wilderness. The U.S. Forest Service must leave its policy unchanged and phase out ANILCA cabins, as was the original intent. These cabins were never meant to persist in Wilderness, and to change this policy would undermine ANILCA and the Wilderness Act. Yes, the preceding is a form comment sent to supporters of Wilderness Watch. The issue is straightforward and not susceptible of nuance. I fully support Wilderness Watch's position on this question.
