

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 3/8/2024 4:43:25 PM

First name: Steven

Last name: Gary

Organization:

Title:

Comments: I visit wilderness often. While I don't live in Alaska, I believe the wilderness designation applies equally to all designated wilderness in the USA. I have been to wilderness in Alaska in ANWR and Glacier Bay Wilderness Areas and it is unsurpassed for its wildness. Cabins don't belong in designated Wilderness. The U.S. Forest Service must leave its policy unchanged and phase out ANILCA cabins, as was the original intent. These cabins were never meant to persist in Wilderness, and to change this policy would undermine ANILCA and the Wilderness Act.