Comments: Hey Forest Service! We're trying to save an environment that has been degraded by humans to the point that life on earth for everyone is going to be impossible. Could you please not take money from greedy people and demo the cabins so non humans can live where they belong, and humans will not be in THEIR house? If you don't protect all non humans, your grandchildren will despise you, no matter how much blood money you leave them. AND YOU KNOW THIS.

Here are more polite words from Wilderness Watch:

Cabins don't belong in designated Wilderness. The U.S. Forest Service must leave its policy unchanged and phase out ANILCA cabins, as was the original intent. These cabins were never meant to persist in Wilderness, and to change this policy would undermine ANILCA and the Wilderness Act.
