Comments: This letter pertains to structures that were constructed in wilderness.

Cabins don't belong in designated Wilderness. The U.S. Forest Service must leave its policy unchanged and phase out ANILCA cabins, as was the original intent. These cabins were never meant to persist in Wilderness, and to change this policy would undermine ANILCA and the Wilderness Act.

Please note that changing the policy to allow the cabins would be to create a special rights category. That would be unwise. And could lead to abuse by bad actors.
