

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 3/8/2024 7:04:12 PM

First name: Heather

Last name: Lutz

Organization:

Title:

Comments: Adding cabins in this wilderness is a terrible, short-sighted idea. Cabins don't belong in designated Wilderness. The U.S. Forest Service must leave its policy unchanged and phase out ANILCA cabins, as was the original intent. These cabins were never meant to persist in Wilderness, and to change this policy would undermine ANILCA and the Wilderness Act. Cabins lead to people, people lead to leaving trash etc. that then wild animals eat or it just pollutes in general. Additional people leads to the natural habitat being disturbed.