Comments: I am very disappointed to hear that the Forest Service is considering turning cabins in Wilderness areas into an ongoing and acceptable feature of the Wilderness, rather than their being something that we are trying to phase out with some sensitivity to the expectations of their builders. These folk have had many years to become accustomed to the idea that their inappropriately placed cabin is not a transferable asset, and there is no reason to turn the cabins into such a thing.

Please continue the phase-out process as originally planned
