

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 3/8/2024 7:39:18 PM

First name: Jennifer

Last name: Bradford

Organization:

Title:

Comments: Designated wild places are just that, wild. They are meant for wildlife and to appreciate nature, not build for humans.

Cabins don't belong in designated Wilderness. The U.S. Forest Service must leave its policy unchanged and phase out ANILCA cabins, as was the original intent. These cabins were never meant to persist in Wilderness, and to change this policy would undermine ANILCA and the Wilderness Act.

Thank you.