Comments: Please keep Alaska wild; this one of the only areas in the US that is pristine and one of the reasons that Alaska is cherished. It would be tragic if it lost that characteristic.

Cabins don't belong in designated Wilderness. The U.S. Forest Service must leave its policy unchanged and phase out ANILCA cabins, as was the original intent. These cabins were never meant to persist in Wilderness, and to change this policy would undermine ANILCA and the Wilderness Act.
