Comments: The illegal cabins must be phased out. They do not belong in wilderness areas. Wilderness areas are a precious heritage for the abundance and diversity of present and future generations of inhabitants living in these areas. Wilderness were designed to remain intact as the namesake portrays. As more humans populate other areas not designated wilderness, these wilderness areas will become all the more priceless to remain unaltered and intact. Cabins must be phased out to eliminate problems and controversies known to cause disturbance and stress radiating out from these seeming benign more permanent public use areas. Wilderness areas are purposely not parks...where public use cabins and infrastructure is allowed bringing more intense use. These separate delineations of park compared to wilderness areas must remain steadfastly differentiated to hold this most precious wilderness heritage of our rapidly dwindling wilderness areas whole, unaltered, and functioning with bare minimal interception of present humans. Wilderness in its purest unaltered state, allow future generations of humans to behold the continuance of the astounding earths faunal and floral life forms in their natural living unfragmented functional ecosystems, unhindered and without the stress of human infrastructures of illegal cabins.

Keep up the good work of protecting and preserving intact whole wilderness areas. But the cabins must go.

Thank you
