Comments: As a concerned citizen of the United States who cares deeply about the environment, I do not think cabins belong in designated Wilderness. We can not go back on promises made to protect our wilderness. The U.S. Forest Service must leave its policy unchanged and phase out ANILCA cabins, as was the original intent. These cabins were never meant to persist in Wilderness, and to change this policy would undermine ANILCA and the Wilderness Act.

Thank you for your consideration.
