

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 3/8/2024 9:24:23 PM

First name: Marianne

Last name: Lazarus

Organization:

Title:

Comments: The United States Forest Service (USFS) should NOT continuing giving permits to the few old cabins on Federal Lands in the Wilderness. The 1987 deal with The Alaskan National Interest Lands Conservation Act (ANILCA) was designed to phase out the few cabins and grant no more permits after the last original family member dies. Now the USFS wants to again grant permits for those cabins. NO! The Wilderness is defined by the lack of anything not made by nature in the area.

Wilderness means WILD.

To give additional permits to those old cabins is defies the ANILCA and the Wilderness Act.

Cabins Do Not belong in the Wilderness.