Comments: I am writing in regard to the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act (ANILCA) Cabin Policy #ORMS-3666. Cabins don't belong in designated Wilderness. The U.S. Forest Service must leave its policy unchanged and phase out ANILCA cabins, as was the original intent. These cabins were never meant to persist indefinitely in Wilderness, and to change this policy would undermine ANILCA and the Wilderness Act. Now is the time to discontinue these cabins in Wilderness areas. Thank you.
