

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 3/8/2024 10:17:34 PM

First name: Teri

Last name: Spray

Organization:

Title:

Comments: Cabins do not belong in designated Wilderness. By definition never would there ever be cabins in Wilderness, they denigrate the integrity of Wilderness and must be phased out. Part of the U.S. Forest Service job is to protect and nurture Wilderness, not mar, damage, distort, or demean the very essence of Wilderness.

The U.S. Forest Service must leave its policy unchanged and phase out ANILCA cabins, as was the original intent. These cabins were never meant to persist in Wilderness, and to change this policy would undermine ANILCA and the Wilderness Act.

Thank you for your time and consideration,

Teri Spray