Comments: Cabins don't belong in designated Wilderness. These cabins were unlawfully constructed on publicly held land, which should never have happened. They should not be allowed to continue just because they have been there for years. The U.S. Forest Service must leave its policy unchanged and phase out ANILCA cabins, as was the original intent. These cabins were never meant to persist in Wilderness, and to change this policy would undermine ANILCA and the Wilderness Act. Keeping the cabins there would allow for potential squatters, creating hazards to the wildlife.
