Comments: Dear Forest Service,

I would think it would be fairly obvious but cabins don't belong in designated Wilderness areas. The U.S. Forest Service must leave its policy unchanged and phase out ANILCA cabins, as was the original intent. These cabins were never meant to persist in Wilderness, and to change this policy would undermine ANILCA and the Wilderness Act and harm the condition of the wilderness designated to be left as just that, wilderness! Thank you. Steev Beeson (213) 924-9091
