Comments: I am writing regarding extending the time for cabins built illegally in wilderness to legally remain. The U.S. Forest Service generously allowed the cabins to remain once built. However, parameters were wisely set for the existence of the cabins so that in time the wilderness could revert to true wilderness. The U.S. Forest Service must leave its policy unchanged and phase out ANILCA cabins, as was the original intent. Changing this policy would undermine ANILCA and the Wilderness Act.
