Comments: Focus on preservation: Preserving the true wilderness character of protected lands is vital. The Forest Service should prioritize ANILCA's original intent by phasing out non-essential cabins within designated Wilderness areas. This ensures a more natural experience for all visitors.

Acknowledge history: While these cabins hold historical significance, we can explore alternative solutions outside of Wilderness areas to honor that legacy.

Compromise: Finding a balance between appreciating the past and upholding wilderness protection is crucial. Work together to ensure both goals are met.
