Comments: Wilderness is a national resource we must protect to the letter of the wise laws protecting it for ours and future generations of Americans. Cabins don't belong in designated Wilderness. The U.S. Forest Service must leave its policy unchanged and phase out ANILCA cabins, as was the original intent. These cabins were never meant to persist in Wilderness, and to change this policy would undermine ANILCA and the Wilderness Act.

Thank you for your attention to this important matter.
