Comments: Please stop cutting trees in the Green Mountain Forest. We need all the large oxygen producing trees that we can sustain. If one travels about in the Vermont forest all we see is small trees and invasive brush. It take a large mature forest canopy to keep the buckthorn from overtaking the woods. It doesn't like the shade a mature forest provides. Travel through the Somerset area in southern Vermont and see what is growing there after years of cutting. I believe the Forest Service stands for forest disservice and promotes logging and building roads in forests. The moose that used to survive are now getting extinct because of traffic on logging roads and the sound of chainsaws.
