Comments: Mountain bike access to the backcountry is of paramount importance. The more people that have an opportunity to experience what our National Forests have to offer, the better in terms of future conservation efforts. Non-electric mountain biking is a huge source of eco-tourism and out of staters seeking backcountry adventures on their bikes will support the local economy. As long as we do it right, mt bikes will have no greater impact than foot traffic. We need to keep mt bike access to Lolo National Forest.
