Comments: I didn't see anything about headphone/speaker use on the trail. This does create user conflicts & can be a safety issue. It is a hard thing to tackle, but some information about headphone use & trail expectations (ability to communicate) would be useful.

There are bone conduction headphones that allow ears to remain open to outside noises. Also, only having one side in with volume that still allows you to hear your surroundings works. The speaker part is inconsiderate of the experience of other users (is probably mostly an issue close to urban environments).
