Comments: We should be trying to create healthy forests. I don't believe selling 600 acres is representative of our values in new england. Once known for impressively strong trees our forests look nothing like they like they once did and I don't believe the way forward is continuing the cycle of clearing our forests for we can sell. Instead it is the forests themselves that have value and people come from all over the world to recreate in our wilderness and our outdoor areas and I believe being good stewards of that land should be our biggest concern. Keep the trees.
