Comments: I grew up in Middlebury, VT and it gave me a lifelong appreciation for and respect for the forests of the Green Mountains. In the 1960's and 1970's those forest were threatened by acid rain. We are faced with the challenge of managing our forests and other wildland for climate resilience, biodiversity, human health, and more. We have the tools to better understand how forests help us - they are the lungs of our shared earth. I oppose the Telephone Gap logging project and believe there is a better way to manage and sustain our forests.
