Comments: My family and I are regular visitors to the White Mountains National Forest, especially in the summer.

As I understand it, the Forest Service says the negative environmental impact of the planned logging will be limited, and therefore it plans to go ahead with the logging. I feel that approach is typical of the flawed thinking that has gotten us where we are now with regard to climate change. Each constituent and entity makes the argument that their individual impact is limited. On a cumulative basis, however, all the "insignificant" impacts add up. Let's all think about having no negative impact at all. The situation is urgent!

Forests existed before humans were around to "manage" them. I think we should allow nature to manage the forest.
