Comments: There is no way to do the wrong thing right. Destroying forests in the name of making them healthier is anything but defensible. Discussing details of the devastation of a forest is fruitless. Just pay attention to the decades of science that tells us that forests are most valuable to us as carbon sinks, to mitigate ongoing climate change. Any forest removal job is best described as a "Killer Job", because the carbon pollution they could have sequestered is killing thousands of people every year.
