Comments: I am so glad that the Forest Service has come up with options for the Telegraph Gap project. I have previously been opposed to most logging operations on public land, but the more I learn about the way forests work, especially in this age of uncertainty about climate change, the more I believe that sustainable forestry practices can make Vermont's forests more resilient to changes. I consider options C and D to be the best, especially since they protect the oldest trees and represent a good compromise between carbon storage and sequestration.
