Comments: While the planet is heating at an alarming rate, there are not often times when we can do something. This is one of those moments. Old growth forests have been shown to be one of the best carbon sinks on the planet. We ask and want third world countries to protect the rainforest but when it comes to our backyard economics comes into play and we are on the verge of allowing the cutting of our own old growth forest. Allowing large swaths of roads to be built into the wood disturbing the ecosystem. If this gets approved then we can't say much about others cutting theirs. Please do not approve this project.
