Comments: I don't mind sharing the slopes with people and as someone who also skis and has friends that snowboard, I have enjoyed working with them and even pulled skiers and boarders behind my snowmobile to high places...

My only concern is that they not take away our ability to snowmobile where we want to. More than happy to co-exist and share the slopes but I expect to be treated with the same kindness and respect that I show them.

I've even assisted mountaineers by rapidly dispersing and hiding avalanche beacons above timberline for them and they appreciated the help.

I do however feel that it is a double standard when they use locations that don't allow us access to ride and yet we have to share our spaces and pay for tabs for grooming that they get to use also.

Like I said before, I'm more than happy to share and co-exist but respect, kindness and understanding needs to be full circle.
