Comments: I believe there must be meaningful wilderness education required of all visitors. It seems that the only thing now is the bear video, which hopefully can be updated every few years so BWCAW veterans don't blow it off. The greater issue of LNT needs to be emphasized. Is there a way to create real accountability for reading/listening to the training? I suggest a team be assigned to develop a system to do that effectively. It would be a challenging assignment since so many people would try to game the system because they don't value their integrity. Perhaps outfitters could have a stronger role in this.

I took my first trips as part of a YWCA camp which taught the rules and the ethics. I know other youth camps in the area have done the same excellent training, but I am not sure how many campers are being taught by these organizations these days. They should be recognized for that work.
