Comments: As a snowmobiler and outdoor recreationist, I appreciate the goal of the project to create opportunities. But I think there is a fundamental problem with mixing motorized and non-motorized use within confined areas as are created with winter recreation and limited access because of parking and snowplowing. Why create conflict when it isn't necessary? The uses have a preference for different terrain, etc. so why not create opportunities in different locales that cater to the use?

There is already parking problems at motorized snoparks and mixing non-motorized users in will only make that worse. Then there will be conflict between users strictly fighting over available parking space adding unnecessarily to the conflict that already exists between these groups.
