Comments: The Eagle Vail Trail is easily accessed at the west end just south of the gas station on Highway 6. The very thought that it was okay to tell a real estate developer that a trail would be created just for their location is outrageous. There is a beautiful bike path along the river right in front of them. They can get on that, ride to the gas station, turn right, and in seconds be on the trail. There is no need for this stretch of land to have a trail cut into it - this cut will be visible from the valley floor. It will be directly adjacent to residential property lines. There are already hikers forging their way up the bluff cutting through our back yards, drunk, loud, lost, and when it rains, do you actually think they don't cut straight down the hill through our yards to our porches and the street seeking shelter? Unless you are going to put up a fence, cover the trail in a tunnel, or move the trail to the other side of the mountain, we will see it, hear it, and be annoyed by it. It serves no benefit.
