Comments: I am a former Fire Fighter and Safety Officer with Sandoval County Fire and Rescue and I have driven the road through Las Huertas Canyon at the beginning of every fire season for years. Las Huertas Canyon is loaded with fuel, dead trees, and widow maker branches and trees are abundant. There are cabins in the canyon that are peoples property. There has been no fuel mitigation in the canyon for decades. Now you want perform a "controlled burn" in this area because it the easiest way? For the burn crews and firefighters there is no safe space anywhere in the canyon so you want to put their lives at risk to perform a burn that your history shows could and probably will get out pf control and destroy property and possibly cost civilians and first responders their lives. THERE ARE OTHER SAFER AND BETTER WAYS TO DO THIS.
