Comments: Winter Park is large enough. It is operated by Alterra Mountain Company which is one of the four oligopoly organizations that control far too much of the US ski market. Increasing size and capacity of Winter Park only increases their control of the market. This expansion would also have traffic and environmental impacts from the site all the way to Denver. Instead of expanding an already overly large operation, new independent ski areas should be built further off the I-70 corridor. The northern and southern front range need more dispersed recreational opportunities.
