Comments: The very thought of a prescribed burn in the Las Huertas Canyon fills me with terror! There a numerous residents who would willingly help with manual thinning, getting the trash piles out to the road where they could be removed and the wood redistributed to the many residents who still heat with wood in stoves. ANY plans for using prescribed burn should be the ABSOLUTE LAST thought. Please sit down with the various groups in Placitas who have had generations of knowledge and responsibility for the environment before making plans based on computer generated models. They may be easier, but not smarter than those who have lived here their entire lives and who have used methods to maintain forest health for generations.
