Comments: I strongly protest the the Jellico Vegetation Management Project. These old growth forests are a vital part of our ecology and deserve better than to be clear cut and logged for timber. There are countless animals that call this forest home and many species that depend on this forest for survival. Climate change is an ever present threat to our plant and the destruction of so much old growth areas will only contribute to this tragic consequence of our greed. We are only one species of millions and this earth and it's inhabitants require our protection.
