Comments: There's a time and a place for everybody to access the national Forest. It's good that there's so many new wilderness areas being founded, at the same time there needs to be lands allocated for those using other alternative mechanisms to travel over snow besides Human powered. My organization supports, the directed and controlled use of non-human powered mechanisms over snow and non-wilderness areas. my guide service believes in equality and inclusion for all peoples from all denominations, aligning with that with the United States forest service. This truly gives rise to the ability for all people from all the backgrounds to be able to use the national forests, the " land of many uses." Neither myself or my organization is involved in snow machines in any fashion, we simply don't want to discriminate against them or any other non-human or mechanized means of travel over snow.
