Comments: I don't snowmobile in this area but I have snowmobiled all my life in Wyoming and I am moving to Colorado so most likely will be snowmobiling here. I believe that a majority of this community respects the wildlife and nature's habitat. We snowmobile for the thrill of the ride not to disturb any wildlife. My snowmobile has the stock can so the exhaust noise is muffled as do most of the snowmobiling community. If there is any question of whether or not we harm the environment the answer is that we do more for the environment than harming it. We buy trail tags and help keep the forest in good condition by riding in the trees. We help the forest service have extra income to work on protects and shelters. Snowmobiling will be a life sport for me and I see no need that land needs to be restricted from our use.
