Comments: The idea that this is what is best for the American people is laughable. As a 20+ year FS employee it's easy to see this as a thinly veiled, half assed, attempt to please some politicians and gain more funding for an invented wildfire crisis. The billions extra going to this "crisis " are actually going to executive bonuses, wasteful equipment, unnecessary junkets all at the expense of actual forest management. Forest management is not understood by this agencies executive management in Washington because they have no experience in it. Congress is being rope a doped into paying for a problem that will only get worse if the current chief and buddies remain in charge. To prevent fire don't hire firefighters, pay your professionals an average wage and remarkably the crisis will end.
