Comments: That part of the trail proposed for decommissioning leads to an old cabin and sauna that are obviously being used and maintained by locals. If the trail to there is decommissioned, it will surely be rebuilt by those using the cabin and, more importantly, damage the support among the local population for the Forest Service. A better option to me would be to make trail improvements to that portion of the trail to make it more sustainable. Perhaps FDRD could be given the responsibility to lay out and build trail improvements without a lot of Forest Service oversight (to preserve Forest Service personnel time, but also to let FDRD have some freedom of operation to put their trail building expertise to use).
