

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 7/12/2024 2:40:14 PM

First name: Onea

Last name: Miller

Organization:

Title:

Comments: If the US Forest Service is worried about keeping their forest, then they should immediately put out a forest fire, without restrictions and hesitation and resistance. Years ago, at Trapper's Lake in Meeker, Colorado, one tree was struck by lightning and smoldered for several days. The Trapper's Lake Lodge and others were begging them to go put that one tree out but the US Forest Service would not let them and it ignited burning, I think, about 12,000 acres of our most beautiful and productive forest, yet today it still looks so sad to see something that was avoidable and controlled by really stupid people. It also burned the lodge down. The US Forest Service needs to only have some common sense and stop all of it's nonsense. Please don't misunderstand me as I have friends that work for the US Forest Service. The Forest Service People should be Stewarts of the land...not idiot's setting behind a desk.