

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 7/20/2024 3:15:22 PM

First name: Carl

Last name: Carnein

Organization:

Title:

Comments: I believe developed parklands in Colorado are, increasingly, an attractive nuisance and should be studied very carefully. The state is already overrun by tourists and doesn't provide the infrastructure to serve them. I live near US 24, and the traffic and accidents on that road are increasing, as they are elsewhere in the state. In addition, more tourist sites means more careless campfires and more wildfires--it's obvious that most fires in the state are human caused. If the Forest Service and state of Colorado don't have the resources to deal with wildfires, then they should not develop more wild areas for tourism.