Comments: I advocate for protecting and maintaining Old Growth Forest in the US, wherever it may be located! There's so little old growth left in the Black Hills of South Dakota, but other forests in our country have select stands of old growth that hasn't been logged out yet, especially in and near some of the west coast forests, and I just read an article in the Sierra Club Magazine about some of the last old growth on the east coast. Old growth is truly a sight to behold, the Douglas Firs, redwoods and sequoias in the west are like entering a cathedral of nature!
